National Human Rights Commission, New Delhi sponsored a State Level Seminar on the Topic “Women Rights and Institution of Marriage - A Need for Shift in the Paradigm” on 01.03.2019

On 01.03.2019, the NHRC, New Delhi, sponsored one day State Level Workshop and Training Programme on the topic ‘Women Rights and Institution of Marriage – Need for Shift in the Paradigm’ was organized in the College. The various topics like, The Institution of Marriage in 21st Century, Women and Equality: Recent Trends and Developments, Discriminative Personal Law Relating to Marriage, Married Women’s Rights to Property – A Comparative View etc., were been addressed during the technical sessions in the programme.

Dr.K.R.Aithal, Former Chairman & Dean Faculty of Law Karnataka University, Dharwad, Dr.Vishwanath.N, Prof & Dean Faculty of Law, Karnataka University, Dharwad, Dr.G.r.Jagadish, Principal, CBR National Law College, Shimoga and Prof.K.B.Vasudeva, Principal, Vidyavardhaka Law College, Mysore were the Resource Persons during this State Level Workshop program. Prof.Subash.G.Plathottam, Assistant Professor was the Convenor of this workshop program.

Family is a part of the society and every family starts with marriage. The institution of marriage exists in every society in one form or the other. People generally feel that marriage and family are the only proper and possible ways of living to live. They have derived such feelings as they have lived in a family as children and have always felt that family is the safest place for living. Hence, marriage is an established norm which reflects the attitude, beliefs and behavior of the people. It is an interpersonal relationship with communal or religious acknowledgment. The concept of marriage is deeply and effectively rooted in every society of the world. Many countries consider marriage as a bond which exclusively gives consent for a sexual relationship and for having children, as in such countries sex and having children before marriage is seen as a sin. The concept of marriage being multi-dimensional involves social, legal, economic and cultural aspects.

Third Millennium Development Goal aims to empower women. Despite serious efforts, process of women empowerment has been lagging behind the target rate. Responsibility of marital status cannot be denied for such outcome because it has an important role in Indian women's life. Marriage in India is considered as an important social event and is supposed to transmit traditional values across generations. Hence, in orthodox society, lone women (unmarried/widow/ divorcee/ separated) are subject to disrespect in anticipation that they are rebelling against patriarchy. Again in this type of society, majority of Indian women are discouraged to opt job, therefore, marriage becomes the only option for their future settlement and security. Hence, life of Indian women is supposed to spin around their marital status, which possibly has some influence on their level of empowerment. Present study evaluate the influence of marital status on women empowerment, explores the possible reasons of difference in empowerment, if any, and suggest some way-out to eliminate this difference. Except married women, all lone women is found to have miserably low empowerment and are not allowed to take part in the familial decisions though they have the right to keep money for their own use and enjoy some mobility freedom.

It is ironical that most women are unaware of their legal rights, and thus keep mum. In order to fight injustice, it is important to have through knowledge about the rights. The Constitution of India, under Article 14, backs women and their rights in the country. It ensures women equality and equal protection of the laws. Article 15(3) empowers the state to take affirmative action in favour of a daughter-in-law.

A wife has the legal authority to live with proper dignity and self-respect with her in-laws. She also has the right to have the same lifestyle that her husband's and in-laws have. This legal right provides married woman independence after marriage.
